The FACE Research and Development Fund 2008/09

For the third year FACE is supporting some small pieces of research into Access and Continuing Education through its Research and Development Fund. In 2008-09 grants have been awarded to three pieces of research.

FACE supported research for 2008/09

Researcher: Mary McKeever, University of Portsmouth

Title: "If they have got something to say, why can't they just say it in English?"

Synopsis: This study will focus on the writing journeys of 6 non-traditional students as they struggle to produce written work for their degree courses. Ethnographic research tends to focus on the bigger picture and linguistics research tends to focus on individual texts (Lillis, 2008). This study will combine both approaches to provide an ethnographic linguistic study of six students, with their unique personal and educational histories, as they articulate their difficulties when tackling the written assignments required on their various courses.

Researcher: Anastasia Dimitriadou, Westminster Kingsway College

Title: "Equipped for learning? A follow up of the effectiveness of an Access to HE delivery model for skills for participatory learning at university."

Synopsis: The proposed research sets out to investigate the value of an Access to HE delivery model for SIL (Skills for Independent Learning) at university through the exploration of former Access to HE students' needs for accessing learning support services during their first year of study at university.

Researcher: Maree Walker, Open College Network London Region

Title: "Are Access to HE learners being recruited onto Foundation Degrees?"

Synopsis: OCNLR proposes to explore the incidence of progression of Access learners into Foundation Degrees (FD) in the London area. With the increase in the number of FDs in London HEIs and in partner FE colleges requiring additional and targeted recruitment, it is of interest to investigate whether cohorts of Access to HE learners are already or could be presenting a pool of qualified entrants for entry onto FDs.

The final reports submitted by those in receipt of FACE research funding in previous years are available on the Research page of the FACE website

"FACE to FACE" Ejournal, Spring Edition

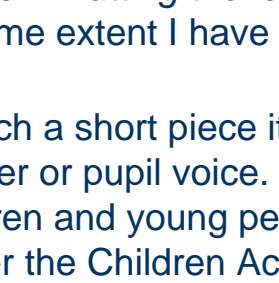

The Spring 2009 Edition of FACE to FACE has been edited and is currently with the copywriters. In its new format as an Ejournal, now with its very own ISSN, it should be available from March 2009.

This edition focuses on The FE/HE interface with contributions from leading lights in this area and tends toward becoming more of an academic journal in its style and content than was the case with previous editions.

"Comparable to Tolkien at his best" according to one reviewer . . . admittedly it was Clifford D Simak and he wasn't reviewing FACE to FACE but that's just a technicality. It really is very good. Members can judge for themselves when it reaches their inboxes shortly. See also the FACE2FACE web page

Editor, Peter Jones, Staffordshire University

Speaker's Corner

SPEAKERS' CORNER

As a member-oriented organisation FACE would like to invite individual colleagues to have their say on any issue of concern in UK education policy and practice. This is a purely personal point of view and should not be thought to represent any institution, organisation, or official body. To have your say, email Jim at James.Tate@uwe.ac.uk

This month's contribution is from Tony Hudson who asks if we are really listening to the voice of the learner?

The more I use the phrase listening to learners the more it seems to resonate, not just with me, but also with others. I'm sure it strikes a chord, not just because of the allure of alliteration, but because in our work we often talk about putting the learner in the centre and giving voice to the learner. "Putting the learner in the centre" someone told me "gives us the moral high ground." And to some extent I have to agree, but only if we're really listening.

In such a short piece it is not possible to rehearse the history, problems and perspectives on learner or pupil voice. Suffice to say that in England the current policy position in relation to children and young people's participation and engagement is based on the notion of "voice". Under the Children Act (2004) local authorities must give children and young people a say in the development of the statutory children and young people's plans.

Having recently begun an evaluation of a pupil voice project I was interested to see how readily the learners had taken up the challenge of participation, whilst the teachers, at least some initially, were hesitant and had reservations about yet another initiative. It would be too easy to simplify their reservations as the fear of losing power – but it certainly does challenge existing relationships, not just between pupil and teacher, but also between teachers themselves. Ruddock and Flutter (2004) have put it more eloquently:

"The pupil voice movement represents a new departure because it is based on the premise that schools should reflect the democratic structures in society at large. Under this conception the school becomes a community of participants engaged in the common endeavour of learning."

Reading around the subject I discovered a gap in the literature – an absence or silence of learner voice in FE and HE. So my question to readers is how should those of us working in FE and HE take up the challenge of listening to learners - engaging with them in a meaningful way about education, teaching and learning.

For colleagues who want to listen as well as talk, Continuum, together with colleagues in the Cass School of Education have organised a conference: Listening to Learners, Partnerships in Action on 22nd April 2009 at UEL's Docklands Campus.

Conference Update - FACE 2009

Towards a New Agenda for Lifelong Learning: Access, Diversity and Participation

1st -3rd July, Staffordshire University

Full conference details are available on the FACE CONFERENCE 2009 web page.

Registration can only be made online ONLINE REGISTRATION FOR FACE 2009

Abstracts can be submitted via the ONLINE ABSTRACT SUBMISSION FORM

Arrangements for FACE 2009 are hotting up, bookings are beginning to come through fast and furious, as too are abstract submissions. This week is the last chance for prospective conference goers to benefit from "Early Bird" booking (prior to 28th February) and receive a free copy of Marginality and Difference in Education and Beyond, edited by Michael Reiss, Renee Depalma and Elizabeth Atkinson, published by Trentham books and worth £18.99.

The magic word here is register! Not submission of an abstract as - not only is that is four words - but, it doesn't qualify as registration (hence no free book). Some of our keynotes have come back with keynote titles and indicative content. The titles will be posted on the conference website shortly. Judging by the titles these keynotes should be stimulating and provide much food for thought and debate.

"Delivering the Promise"

Thursday 19 March 2009
Marriott Hotel, Mill Lane, Cardiff CF10 1EZ

Hosted by the Welsh Assembly Government, Department of Children Education, Lifelong Learning and Skills, Qualification and Curriculum Division. The conference will consider the impact of the vocational reform and curriculum development in Wales. The importance of increasing the skills levels for the work force in Wales has never been more apparent. The radical reform of vocational qualifications and the introduction of a responsive, flexible credit based regulated Qualifications and Credit Framework (QCF) are important and welcome developments in Wales. Importantly the vision is totally consistent with the aspiration of the Credit and Qualifications Framework for Wales (CQFW).

The key speakers include: Mike Clancy Director Qualifications Curriculum and Learning Improvement Group; Trevor Clark Head of Credit and Qualifications Framework for Wales; Mike Cole NLIAH, NHS in Wales; Paul Oliver Head of Vocational Qualifications pre-19.

There will be workshop sessions on: Benefits of a Credit System; Principal Learning Qualifications; Essential Skills Wales; Welsh Medium Vocational Qualifications; Impact on Delivery on a Credit Based System.

To reserve a place at this event contact joan.thomas@wales.gsi.gov.uk or Fax to 01443 663653. For further details on the event contact: Joan Thomas on 01443 663692.

CRADALL Seminar

"Regulatory Quality and Global Education: What is the connection?"

3.00pm to 5.00pm, Monday 16 March 2009
Faculty of Education, University of Glasgow

Presented by Professor Josef Konvitz, Head of Division, Regulatory Policy, OECD. Questions and discussion will be encouraged as part of the seminar. The seminar is free and open to all.

The OECD has been helping countries to improve their regulatory management systems since the mid-1990s and, increasingly, the benefits of regulatory reform are being applied to fields such as higher education and the environment, in addition to more familiar terrain related to network utilities, energy and product markets. As head of the Regulatory Policy Division of the OECD, Dr Konvitz will present an overview of the scope of OECD work, together with insights into how civil society and governments learn from each other's experience to shape both domestic and international agendas in this field.

To register for the seminar contact Patsy Shiels (CRADALL) P.Shiels@educ.gla.ac.uk

Professional Development Conference for Teachers in Higher Education
Institute for Education Policy Research at Staffordshire University
8th May 2009

The theme of this year's conference is "The pursuit of learning as a co-operative enterprise: implications for higher education" and the speakers will be Professor Miriam David, Professor Peter Hartley and Paul Orsmond. The attendance fee is £65.
